Update: The Grand National race course was inspected on April 15, 2019 by Peter Fenwick.

Turf: The turf is in good condition throughout with the exception of the area around the GN 12th and GN 14th. These areas are thinner than usual, but are filling in. The entire course has been mowed.

Smoothness: The entire course has been Cambridge rolled and harrowed and is the smoothness of fair hunting country.

Compaction: Compaction readings range from 70-120 (yielding to good).

Moisture: Readings range from 6 (average) in the higher areas to solid 10 (wet) in the lower areas. The course received approximately an inch of rain Sunday evening, but is under high winds on Monday, and sun for the next several days is predicted. There are two areas of noted concern following many months of extreme rainfall. The area several strides after the second fence of the Grand National has developed a spring. The area is being monitored and slowly drying, and some form of go around is considered. Similarly, the area after the Grand National 4th has developed a spring and modification is considered. The second last of the Western Run Plate is also affected by this latter spring with modification considered. Final decisions regarding the above concerns to be made by week's end and will be communicated in the notices.
